■報告 Report :

The IEL was intensive and fruitful to find the direction for GSDM2.0. Ten students and six faculty members participated in the IEL actively. The meeting consisted of reviewing the current activities, the summary of the survey, and the workshop to find a direction.

In the workshop, we were divided into three groups and discussed how we could improve GSDM activities. The discussion was made by following the design thinking process: empathize, define, ideate, prototype, and test. Each group discussed the current problems, solutions, and concrete proposals during group work and shared the results with all participants. In the end, each group created a prototype of activities and events of GSDM 2.0.

GSDM Student Committee is now discussing the outcome of the IEL and will share the results with GSDM members afterward. We hope we can really implement some of the IEL's outcome.
