

GSDM Student Initiative Projects

About GSDM 2.0

GSDM 2.0 is a cross-departmental education program for students of Graduate Schools at UTokyo. It is open to graduate students from all faculties. The current GSDM student body includes 16 nationalities and offers a truly cosmopolitan environment. Students are encouraged to explore the main questions that dominate contemporary society, with global perspective, bridging policy discussions, norms, regulations, with a multi-disciplinary approach.

About SIPs

SIPs are projects led by GSDM students. They are responsible for planning and execution, with opportunities to develop project design and management skills, communication skills, and leadership with a global and interdisciplinary mindset.

Funding is provided by GSDM.

“I found myself motivated to work together with others and acquire an international viewpoint on themes such as utilizing drone technology in agriculture in Thailand and developing space technology in Cambodia.”
